"Toots" enjoys immensely taking his dinner from the bottle, just as any other baby might. He is now covered with many brown spots, but as he grows older they will leave just as the fawn's spots disappear.

EXECUTION DAY HERE FOR RYE AND CORN—SAFE FOR BEER

Washington, July 6.—Famous trial of booze, beer and wine in the United States senate is nearing an end.

After three weeks of wordy battle, case is expected to go to jury late today. Verdict may come before sundown.

There is no question as to fate of spirits. They will be given the death penalty. Beer and wine are expected to survive.

Senate chamber was crowded early to hear final speeches beginning at 2 p. m. Under decision handed down late yesterday, debate is limited to ten minutes by each senator on section under which all of famous beverages are now subject to conviction.

On different questions as they will be voted on, the following predictions were made today:

To prohibit manufacture of spirits and leave the fate of beer and wine to the president, wets and Republican dries will constitute a small majority against such a verdict.

To prohibit all three—spirits, beer and wines—about 30 radical votes will be cast favoring such a verdict with a majority against it.

To prohibit spirits and not interfere with beers and wines, an overwhelming verdict is expected.

With these questions disposed of, the senate expects to dispose of the whole food measure by next Wednesday or Thursday.

PLAN FOR GREAT AIR FLEET UP TO CONGRESS

Washington, July 6.—Chairman Dent of the house military committee today introduced the administration bill authorizing establishment of a gigantic aerial corps. Hearings on the bill will begin Monday. Dent expects to report the bill out next week.

The bill authorizes the purchase, manufacture, maintenance, repair and operation of a huge corps of aeroplanes. It authorizes also the purchase of aviation grounds and gives the president full authority over the proposed air fleet.

CHAOS AHEAD FOR CHINA AS NEW MONARCHY TOTTERS

Tokio, July 6.—Endless chaos in China seems to lie ahead.

Dispatches today revealed makeshift monarchy tottering on its throne. Pres. Li Huan Yung of the former republican regime has escaped his pursuers. Southern provinces are planning secession from any Manchu ruler. Armed clash impending between Peking and Tien Tsin between two factions in monarchist ranks.

Monarchists have so far failed to force Pres. Li Huan Yung's resignation, although former executive has so far failed to show any signs of a fight.

LOOP STORES MAY COMBINE DELIVERY SERVICES

Chicago department stores are considering a plan to centralize delivery service by allowing one firm to handle all merchandize. This should cut cost to the consumer.

A meeting of the managers of loop stores will be held in the Hotel LaSalle tonight.
